Westchester residents and businesses alike recognize that their most valuable resource is human capital, and they invest accordingly. The county's outstanding educational facilities provide excellence at all levels, from pre-school to post-graduate, and include technical and vocational skills development.

Schools

Westchester's 43 school districts reflect the diversity of the county in many ways, and all share a mutual commitment to excellence and achievement. School districts vary in enrollment size, from smaller village districts to larger urban systems.

Expenditures per pupil are substantial throughout the county. Pupil/teacher ratios are kept low, and support personnel and services are extensive. Westchester continues to attract well-qualified professionals to staff its schools. Many teachers have graduate degrees and continue to participate in ongoing professional activities. Three Westchester County schools won Blue Ribbon Awards for educational excellence from the U.S. Department of Education in 2005, another three won in 2006, and one won the Award in 2007.

Westchester's school districts are in the vanguard of innovative educational concepts and programs. Involvement, commitment and support on the part of teachers, administrators, parents, local business and government leaders have created dynamic and stimulating learning environments to accommodate the plurality of needs and talents in the student population. Within New York State, Westchester students excel in the Regents examinations, pupil evaluation programs and preliminary competency tests. SAT scores in the county exceed state and national averages, and an exceptionally large proportion of students take college entrance exams. Most Westchester high school students go on to college, with some districts reporting close to or 100 percent matriculation in post-secondary education.

For those students wishing to enter the workforce directly, many vocational programs are offered within local school districts and through the Board of Cooperative Educational Services (BOCES). These programs include Occupational Education, Special Education, Instructional Services, Information Systems and Interscholastic Athletics and Transportation Services. In addition, Westchester County contains several Special Act Districts, which provide unique educational and therapeutic opportunities to students, between the ages of five (5) and twenty-one (21), who have experienced difficulty in traditional school settings.

Westchester County offers a choice of private elementary and secondary schools as well. Among these are a number of culturally-oriented institutions, such as the German School, the French-American school and Keio High School, a Japanese high school, indications of Westchester's increasingly diverse population.

Higher Education

The county is home to more than twenty post-secondary schools, almost all of which grant degrees. These schools range from public and private two-year institutions to liberal arts institutions to universities that, when combined, offer a full range of bachelor's degrees all the way to doctorates in several fields as well as medical and law degrees. In addition, several business schools offer certificate programs designed to provide entry into highly technical vocational fields. The county's higher education institutions are run by a variety of organizations, including the state and county government, several religious groups and for-profit corporations.

Libraries

Westchester's vast library resources serve the information and recreational needs of its residents as well as academic and business communities. The Westchester County Library System (WLS), organized 35 years ago, is comprised of 38 independent member public libraries (several of these have multiple branches). The WLS maintains on-line catalogs for more than 30 academic and school libraries. The WLS website is located at: <http://www.wls.lib.ny.us/ns.html>

In addition to the public libraries, Westchester has 18 academic libraries that permit on-site use by outside users. Many of these libraries house unique collections in literature, art, music or law. There is also a number of smaller, special interest libraries throughout the county, most of which can be accessed by appointment.

Web site links are provided in the following list of colleges and universities. The Westchester County Association web site allows users to link to public school districts as well as other educational sites located at: <http://www.westchester.org/edufrm.htm>

*Notes:

- Level 1: Test scores indicate that these students have serious academic deficiencies. These students demonstrate no evidence of proficiency at all in one or more of the standards and do not reach proficiency in any of the standards.
- Level 2: Test scores indicate that these students will need extra help to meet the standards and pass the Regents examinations. These students demonstrate some knowledge and skills for each standard or full proficiency in one or more, but not all, of the assessed standards.
- Level 3: Test scores indicate that student performance at least meets standards and, with continued, steady growth, these students should pass the Regents examinations. Students demonstrate knowledge and skills for each applicable standard.
- Level 4: Test scores indicate that student performance exceeds the standards and students are moving toward high performance on the Regents examinations. Students demonstrate superior knowledge and skills in each standard area.
